

CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

Leadership role with global impact

- Partnerships • Advocacy • Education
- Projects & Programs

Baptist World Aid Australia (BWAA) is a long-established international Christian development organisation. Inspired by the message of the gospel through Jesus Christ and together with its overseas partners, BWAA is committed to empowering communities to lift themselves out of poverty, challenge injustice and build resilience. Today it supports around 80 community development projects and is represented in over 20 countries.

After 10 years of growth, BWAA's long serving CEO is ready to hand over this pivotal role to a seasoned senior executive able to bring best practice contemporary management and lead its dedicated team of professionals based in Sydney's north. It is important that you have exposure to international development through projects and/or field visits and a broad understanding of relevant legislation and practices governing international aid agencies such as BWAA.

To represent BWAA across national and international platforms, we envisage you are already recognised as a transformational leader with experience honed from a medium to large multi-faceted organisation. Your Christian understanding should include a sound theology of development centred on God's concern for the poor. As the role will require that you actively engage within the Baptist denomination and its institutional structures, active participation in your own local Baptist church is strongly preferred.
